

LATIN AMERICA TRADE COALITION

November 10, 2008

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE UNITED STATES CONGRESS:

As Congress is expected to convene a “lameduck” session in the weeks ahead to consider an economic stimulus package, the Latin America Trade Coalition — a broad-based group of 1,200 U.S. companies, business and agricultural organizations, and chambers of commerce — urges Congressional leaders bring to a vote the U.S.-Colombia Trade Promotion Agreement and the U.S.-Panama Trade Promotion Agreement. These market-opening, job-creating agreements will provide a measurable boost for the U.S. economy at a time when American workers, farmers and consumers need it more than ever.

U.S.-Colombia Trade Promotion Agreement

Colombia is the second largest Spanish-speaking country in the world, and U.S.-Colombia trade grew by 54% in the first six months of 2008 — faster than U.S. trade expanded with any other Latin American nation. More than 10,000 U.S. companies export their products to Colombia, and 85% of these are small and medium-sized companies that would benefit directly from the Colombia agreement.

Building on these strong ties, the Colombia agreement would do away with a trade relationship built on temporary unilateral preferences and replace it with one that is mutually beneficial, reciprocal, and permanent. The Andean Trade Preference Act already allows 93% of all imports from Colombia to enter the U.S. market duty free. By contrast, Colombia’s average duty on imports from the United States is 14% for manufactured goods and far higher for key agricultural exports. U.S. exporters have paid over $1.3 billion in unnecessary tariffs since this agreement was signed. In short, Colombians enjoy nearly free access to our market while our access to theirs remains limited.

This agreement would remedy the unfairness of today’s U.S.-Colombia trade relationship by sweeping away most of Colombia’s tariffs immediately. In addition, the agreement would open services markets and secure the intellectual property of U.S. inventors, researchers, and creative artists. It has the same enforceable protections for worker rights and the environment as the Peru agreement previously approved by Congress. Colombia’s Congress has already enacted into law all of the provisions on labor, the environment, public health and enforcement agreed to in the bipartisan trade deal of May 10, 2007.

The geostrategic importance of the agreement is profound. The agreement will help Colombians lock in the unprecedented gains of the past decade, which has seen violence fall to its lowest level in a generation accompanied by a remarkable increase in economic and social opportunity for the Colombian people. More than 40,000 fighters have been demobilized as insurgent groups have lost legitimacy, and the number of Colombians enrolled in school and the health care system has risen sharply. While much has been said about the presumed level of labor violence, the Colombian government has worked diligently to address this issue in recent years, and the homicide rate among trade unionists in Colombia is now lower than the overall murder rate in the United States. These sustained results are a triumph of brave Colombians as well as bipartisan U.S. foreign policy.

There is particular urgency to approving the Colombia trade agreement this year. Because the Administration transmitted the implementing bill for the agreement to Congress in April, the bill enjoys the benefits of protection under Trade Promotion Authority (TPA) during the 110th Congress. If it is not approved this year, a new implementing bill in the 111th Congress would face tremendous uncertainty under House and Senate rules relating to how it would be considered. In short, without TPA protection it would be nearly impossible to pass this trade agreement next year.

U.S.-Panama Trade Promotion Agreement

In similar fashion, the Panama trade agreement would strengthen the century-old U.S.-Panama geostrategic partnership. From the time of the canal's construction, the United States and Panama have made common cause on issues from security to commerce. Panama has major ports on both the Atlantic and the Pacific, and fully five percent of world trade passes through the canal. With a remarkable one-third of its population speaking English fluently and a fully dollarized economy, Panama is a good friend and partner of the United States. The trade agreement will help Americans and Panamanians reap even more benefits from these longstanding ties.

Like the agreement with Colombia, the Panama trade agreement would level the playing field for American workers, farmers, and companies by eliminating over 88% of Panama's tariffs on U.S. consumer and industrial goods and a majority of the most competitive U.S. farm exports immediately upon implementation. Panama's average duty on imports from the United States is 7%, whereas the United States eliminated nearly all its tariffs on imports from Panama through the Caribbean Basin Initiative in 1984. The agreement would make these trade openings reciprocal — a two-way street that would benefit both countries.

In addition, the Panama Canal Authority is undertaking an expansion of the canal at a cost of more than $5 billion — one of the largest public works projects in the world today. If approved, the agreement would grant U.S. firms ready access to the Panamanian market and the chance to compete in selling everything from heavy equipment to engineering services in a market that has reached annual growth rates above 8% in recent years.

With its economy overwhelmingly based on services, Panama's economy complements the strengths of the U.S. economy. Panama has no significant textile or apparel industry, and its farmers' export crops (mostly tropical products) do not compete with U.S. farm and ranch products. Panama has already ratified all eight International Labor Organization conventions on core labor standards, and Panama's National Council of Organized Workers, the umbrella group for all of the country's trade unions, endorsed the agreement in June 2007. Environmental stewardship has long been a priority for Panamanians as the canal relies the forests in the watershed that allows this engineering marvel to function.

There is still time for Congress to lend a helping hand to U.S workers and farmers by approving both of these landmark agreements. To delay approval of these trade deals would be to abandon America's closest allies in Latin America at a critical moment. To approve them would spur the economic growth and job creation that U.S. workers, farmers, and companies need; and approval of these agreements is a logical part of any stimulus package. The Latin America Trade Coalition urges Congress to approve the U.S.-Colombia Trade Promotion Agreement and the U.S.-Panama Trade Promotion Agreement during the upcoming "lameduck" session of Congress.

Sincerely,
